

Beyond the Horizon of Information Security

How bacteria could revolutionise information security

When IPv6 security will bite you

Why clouds are gathering

How new vulnerabilities will be identified in your software

Will cost savings equate to lower security

What really happens inside the cloud

Making Sense of Risk

Thursday 23rd September 2010

9:30am – 5:00pm

Making Sense of Risk

One of a series of events hosted by MWR InfoSecurity
Thursday 23rd September 2010, 9:30am – 5:00pm

Altitude 360, London

We will be following the successful format of the last Making Sense of Risk with a business focused morning session followed by an afternoon examining technological risk.

Registration and coffee,
9:45 – 10:30

Morning Sessions,
10:30 – 13:00

The Gathering Cloud,
How To Assess The Challenges and Balance
Business Benefits

Guest Speaker, Phil Hunt,
Information Security Manager,
BUPA

A Topology of Cloud Attack Methods and Threats.

Martyn Ruks, Technical Director,
MWR InfoSecurity

Coffee

Cost Saving Securely: Cutting costs, not security.

Ian Shaw, Managing Director,
MWR InfoSecurity

Afternoon Registration

Lunch, 13:00 – 14:00

Afternoon Sessions,
14.00 – 16:00

A Biological Information Security Revolution?

Guest Speaker, Dave Chismon,
Birmingham University

Finding Zero-Day
Vulnerabilities Consistently,
the Methodology.

Nils, Principal Researcher,
MWR InfoSecurity

Afternoon Tea and Coffee

300 Days Time – Why IPv6
Security Becomes Important

John Fitzpatrick, Senior
Consultant, MWR InfoSecurity

Drinks, 16:00

During the day there will be the opportunity to see and discuss the zero-day vulnerabilities found by MWR Labs and to participate in the first MSOR challenge. As always, the opportunity to network with other IT Security professionals and presenters will exist throughout the event.

Registration

Please register in advance as places are limited, either by emailing msor7@mwrinfosecurity.com or contacting your MWR InfoSecurity Business Manager. Please indicate whether you are interested in attending the whole day or the morning/afternoon session only.

